

A MORTGAGED BABY.

Write Town up and Judges Defied—Judge Davis seeing about it A Struggle for the Custody of a Child.

James Davis was on Tuesday taken before Justice Palmer by Deputies Sheriff Gage, by virtue of a writ of attachment from Judge Brady, who had been served with a writ of habeas corpus requiring him to bring his son, a boy three years old, and to answer the claim of Mrs. Elizabeth Clark, who mothered it for its custody. Henry Davis, his attorney, and defense, said he would return, as was next served with a citation to show why he should not be punished as for a contempt of court. This trial was tried in the courtroom. He took it up and swore it would not be bothered with pesky law officers. The attachment was then released, its date, but took in the recent heat in a shelled and much blustered condition. Judge Davis was not present when the child was taken into the court. He replied that the child had been taken into his family against his will and he had no right to do so. It did not occur to him to inquire if this did not excuse him from making a return to the writ served on him but that branch of the law was not a part of his education. Judge Davis at length told him that he should stand committed until he produced the child. At this point he was asked if he would release the child to Mrs. Loring, and told him that she had the custody of young Franklin. "Well, I suppose," said the judge, "that you or your wife have the child brought into court for investigation into his rightful custody." Mrs. Davis expressed her dissatisfaction of the procedure of the court, and the attorney of her party came out. She said that she took Frank when he was from his mother's home, to nurse him for an agreed compensation of one month, and never paid. She thought he was entitled to keep the child until the $12 a month was paid. With this assurance that legal rights were on her side, she turned around to produce the child in court yesterday.

At the opening of the Court Mr. Hoyle fulfilled his promise. The child is a bright little fellow, with comely face, fair hair nicely curled, and nest dress. His faint expressions of desire to remain in the room enlisted the sympathy of all in the court room.

After hearing conflicting evidence from both sides, Judge Davis, after consulting with his colleagues, said: "I am of opinion that the boy should remain with his mother." The boy took Franklin in his arms and walked out of the courtroom saying, "I must have the child. I'm sure that you will give it to me." The mother followed weeping hysterically.
